

Mughal Pavilion in 2008

This unique structure could have also been a mausoleum or simply a garden pavilion. Built in the 18th century Lakhori brick, the façade is ornamented in a floral style. The building was in a ruinous state with the red sandstone brackets, lattice screens and parapet removed from here – all requiring restoration together with the missing stucco plasterwork. Major repairs were also required to the flat dome – portions of which had caved-in.

Mughal Garden Pavilion
CONSERVATION & LANDSCAPE

Mughal Pavilion
in 2007

Mughal Pavilion: Now

Mughal Pavilion
in 2007

Mughal Pavilion
During Conservation

Mughal Pavilion exteriors
in 2008

Mughal Pavilion
exteriors: Now

Mughal Pavilion interiors
in 2008

Mughal Pavilion
interiors: Now

